Sultan's Treasure
One-of-a-kind Art Jewel
Crafted in New York City

An enormous palace complex created by the Ottoman sultans from the 15th-17th centuries, Topkapi is rife with ornate and exotic architecture as well as priceless objects of precious materials and gemstones. Many colorful stories are attached to this famous structure featuring sultans, courtiers, concubines, and scheming savvy who lived and worked there when it was the court of the Ottoman Empire.

Upon visiting this magnificent repository an Ottoman Empire's head ornament which bears a large emerald framed by a row of diamonds and pearls, also set with a ruby, took Abellán's breath away.

After Abellán's visit to Topkapi, in particular the Emerald Room of the Treasure section of the palace, she was inspired to create these magnificent ear pendants which blend African diamonds and emeralds as well as pearls of different colors. They evoke the opulence of the Ottoman sultans' lifestyles in their lush use of stones and their antique forms. These one-of-a-kind drop ear pendants would make any wearer feel like the wife of a sultan.
